AWI Quality Standards

Ashley Goodin is the Technical Services Manager for the Architectural Woodwork Institute, having held that position since January 2013. Prior to coming to AWI, Ashley was the Inspections Manager for the AWI Quality Certification Program after having started with QCP as an inspector for the Southeastern US in early 2009. In his years of working in close relation to the standards compliance and standards development, Ashley has had the opportunity to visit many manufacturers and their projects and see the practical application of industry standards and how to best leverage their use in business.

Ashley is a member of the American Society for Association Executives and earned his designation as a Certified Association Executive in May of 2016. He is also a member of the Georgia Society of Association Executives and completed the GSAE Leadership Academy in September of 2016.

Ashley began his woodworking career in his dad's hobby shop behind their childhood home. His passion for building led him to spending the summers during his high school years contracting with the high school where he attended refurbishing playground equipment, building bathroom stalls, and renovating the concession stands at the various venues around campus. After a brief stint studying business management at Georgia Southwestern State University, Ashley opened a small construction and remodeling company focusing on the many historic homes and churches in the area. He soon supplemented the construction business with a 7000 square foot millwork shop, which later became the core of his business until site construction waned during the economic downturn, and he closed his shop after operating for 11 years. Ashley currently resides in Americus, Georgia with his wife, Meg, who is a clinical nutrition manager and the foodservice director for the local hospital, and their two sons, Hudson who is 5, and Hayes who is 3. He has been a volunteer firefighter since 2001, serves on the board of directors for the local community theater, and heads the Men's Club in its community outreach and fellowship efforts for Calvary Episcopal Church.

In this event Ashley will be presenting to us current events with the AWI Quality Standards
